The Royal Oak started life in the 18th century as a coaching inn and is known for its historic links with literary greats.

Coleridge and Wordsworth are known to have frequented the inn, as did so many of the Romantic poets of the time, including Tennyson, Ruskin, Shelley and Southey. Just outside our inn you can find a carved plaque on the wall that pays testimony to our literary roots.

Today, the Royal Oak is a characterful and charming place to stay where every guest is met with a warm smile and a roaring fire in the colder months. We have cosy rooms after a day out on the fells and your dog companions are more than welcome – we even have a special dog menu just for them!

Refuel with one of the hearty dishes from our extensive menu, freshly prepared using trusted local suppliers.
